A durious fact relative to a woman's personality is that the two sides of her face are not in accord one with the other. In other words, every woman has two faces, and one shows certain characteristics which the other does not, and each contradicts the

The left side is nearly always the prettier, although it would take a very keen eye to discern any difference, but it is worth while to remember this when posing for one's photograph.

The moral of this is obvious. The left side of the face showing to far better advantage than the right, it is every one's duty to keep the good side turned toward an observer

Often times the prettiest woman takes a bad photograph, while a plain woman with regular features takes a good one. So study yourself in a glass before you sit for your photograph.-New York Journal

I Am Thinking of My Mother.

I am thinking of my mother,
And again I am a child,
As memory brings before me
The sunshine of her smile.
And the soft, melodious echoes
Of her sweet, angels voice
Still linger all around me.
And bid me to rejoice:
And often, in my visions.
I see her form afar.
Her loved eye brightly gleaming
From some unclouded star.

I am thinking of my mother,
And, though the careless throng
Whose only god is pleasure,
May sing their siren song,
Yet my mother's gentle teachings,
Which my childhood's bosom bore,
On my heart are still engraven.
Though she is now no more;
And my every thought grows brighter,
As an infant's sinless brow,
As a whispering spirit tells me
She is gazing on me now.

I am thinking of my mother.
And every thought doth roll
Like a cool, refreshing wave.
Through the desert of my soul;
And the memories that they bring me
Of the bright and happy past:
Steal many a drop of sorrow
That in my cup is cast;
And hope, with gentle accents,
Speaks softly in my ear.
That with God and the angels
I shall see my mother dear.

Dirty Mirror rurposely.

Whenever a looking glass appears in a scene in a play above a fireplace. in a sideboard, or a cabinet, one is almost sure to hear somebody ask his or her neighbor why the glass has been smeared with whiting or soap or something that dulls its surface completely. All sorts of reason are hazarded or suggested. Sometimes it is stated that it is done for luck, at others that they did not intend to leave it dirty. The real explanation is, however, a simple one. The glass is dirtied to prevent the illusion of the scene being destroyed, as it certainly would be if the audience saw in it the reflection of themselves, or, worse still, the reflection of the people in the wings carrying on the business of the stage.

Fishermen Best Sailors.

The French fisheries, with headquarters at St. Pierre and Miquelon, have been carried on under the bounty system since the year 1816. The reasons given why a bounty should be allowed are that the fisheries form a nursery for the navy, and thus the government is enabled to secure men for that branch of the service who are not only familiar with the sea. but who, from experience in their business, are quick to think and act in times of emergency, the theory be-

Statesmen of Value.

Of an eminent English statesman who was a very dull speaker Lord Ashbourne once told this story: "He was making a very dull speech one evening when I remarked to a member of the cabinet on the dreariness of the performance. 'He is an admirable man, was the reply. 'I wish we had him.' 'What would you do with him?" 'Do with him? Send him to Ireland, of course. He would disperse any nalawful assembly in five min-

Ingenious Smuggling Device.

One of the latest devices of the smuggler is to bring in rings, watches and other compact articles of value concealed in books. A thick, innocent-looking volume is selected for the purpose and a hole hollowed out in the center large enough to receive the smuggled goods. The book is then closed and tied up. Its weight offers no clew to the presence of the valuables, even if the inspector should take it in his hand, and a book is, of course, likely to pass muster even with the most careful customs agents.

FRENCH LOVE OF SHOW.

Well Illustrated by Incident of the Early Republic.

Albert Vandam, a French writer, tells this story of the early days of the French republic, which followed the downfall of Louis Napoleon: "One volunteers from the south, wearing enormously broad-brimmed felt hats and dressed in sable garments all over. They looked like funeral mutes, and they were evidently determined to act up to their appearance, for, wondrous to relate, they marched through the principal streets without opening their lips-a proceeding somewhat different from that of the rest. As a matter of course, the crowd was tragically impressed. The impression, however, did not last long. The volunteers felt thirsty, and their chief. who wore a still more enormous hat than his men, signaled to them in the refreshment. That spoilt the whole was in speech was out. They informed their admirers that they had plant life at such excessive tempera come from the department of Gers their homes; a hundred and one they Monthly. would return. Married Life in Abyssinia.

In Abyssinia, a husband who can afford the expense is continually adding to his household of wives. As soon as his favorite begins to pall on him he deposes her for another. The new wife rules the house, dictates orders to the other wives, who strange as it may seem, obey her without open remonstrance. If any of the former favorites ever cared for their lord they soon cease to be jealous of his affections. Leading Horse-Raising States

Erroneous impressions are in circulation as regards the leading horseraising states. One is impressed that Kentucky is entitled to the lead from the frequency that the horses of the Bluegrass State are eulogized. Yet there are fifteen states that surpass Kentucky in the number of their horses, while the average value in twenty-three states rates higher than the horses of the Bluegrass State. The horses of New Jersey average $99.28 a head, and of New Mexico $17.52, the extremes of average prices in the different states and territories.-Drovers' Journal.

Show Surgical Operations.

Cinematograph records are now made of all operations performed by a certain famous physician and surgeon in Paris. He entered some time ago into an arrangement with an oper ator of the bioscope, who has taken pictures for the doctor on several occasions. It is stated that the records in question are invaluable as scientific documents. One of the surgeon's operations which has been cinematographed was that by which the link of flesh connecting the Hindu twins. Redica and Doodica was severed.

"The Silent Sea." Of all the navigated seas of the Fills world the most dreaded by the mariner is the great Southern ocean, which stretches between the Cape and Australia, and lies nearest to the Antarctic circle. How Lunatic Asylum Doctor Escaped Threatened Ducking.

The doctor of a lunatic asylum was the opening of the whistle. When the in the bathroom one day watching a number of his patients bathe, when one of then called out suddenly, "Let's duck the doctor." The cry was taken up at once, "Let's duck the doctor!"

Seeing his danger, the doctor, with great promptitude, said-"All right, boys; but suppose, now you give the doctor a cheer before ducking him."

This reasonable proposition was at once acceded to, and a ringing cheer resounded through the building. which at once brought the keepers, as the doctor expected, and he was saved.

Fair Japanese Smoke.

Smoking is almost a universal custom among Japanese women. The empress uses a silver pipe with a stem ten inches long. The bowl is small-in fact, only a quantity of tobacco sufficient to give the smoker two or three whiffs can be put into it. Then the ashes are knocked out and the pipe is carefully cleaned before it is refilled. To an American this form of smoking seems to involve too much work. A pipe is cleaned many times in the course of an afternoon. The Japanese word for smoking means, literally, "drinking tobacco."

An Infinite Giver.

Think you, when the stars are glinting, Or the moonlight's shimmering gleam Paints the water's rippled surface With a coat of silvered sheep.
Think you, then, that God the Painter Shows His masterpiece divine?
That He will not hang another Of such beauty on the line?

Think you, when the air is trembling
With the birds' exultant song.
And the biossoms, mutely fragrant,
Strive the anthem to prolong—
Think you, then, that their Creator,
At the signal of His word.
Fills the earth with such sweet music
As shall ne'er again be heard?

He will never send a blessing
But have greater ones in store,
And each off recurring kindness
Is an earnest of still more.
If the earth seems full of glory
As His purposes unfold.
There is yet a better country—
And the balf has not been told!

Some Virtues of Louis XIV.

One need not overlook the enormous shortcomings of Louis XIV as a man and as a king to admit that in some important respects he "tried to do his duty," says Longman's Magazine. He was a hardworking sovereign, both in the sphere of administration and in that social sphere which was, to his mind, no less im portant. So courteous that he never passed the porrest woman about the palace without lifting his hat, he carried polite con ideration to the level

Worms in Millions.

The sciaras, of the genus tipulx tiny, wormlike creatures which are found in the forests of Norway and early in August gather in huge numbers preparatory to migrating in search of food or for a change of conditions.
